Dear Dr. Fenichel:

This will probably find you on vacation and, I hope, well enjoying yourself.

We went through a rather shaky period lately, which put out of action most of our public buildings, including hospitals. It would be an exaggeration to call it "fun"; however, the public's morale was far superior to the various ominous predictions. I was quite intrigued by observations of the grim humor attitude.

As our libraries don't work properly either, I wonder whether you can help out: Do you still have a reprint of your husband's "Ueber Trophae und Triumph", Z XXIV, 1939? Maybe even Bertram D. Lewen's "Psychoanalysis of Elation"?

As far as our local scene goes, with sandstorms, encephalitis, earthquakes, etc., I am afraid I have no contributions to offer to the issue of "Boredom", as far as personal experiences go.

With best personal regards,

Yours sincerely,

Richard D. Loewenberg, M.D.
