

Draft of the Gentleman's Agreement of Feb. 2nd and Feb. 13th, 1950 between the two groups in the Education Committee of the Los Angeles Institute for Psychoanalysis.

(1) At the regular meeting of the Los Angeles Psychoanalytic Institute, the unanimous decision was made, after considerable discussion, to follow the proposal of Dr. Miller and Dr. Ross to establish another psychoanalytic institute in L.A. In order to do this, the three members of the Education Committee, Dr. Milton Miller, Dr. Martin Grotjahn and Dr. Ross will ~~resign from the Los Angeles Institute for Psychoanalysis~~ apply to the proper authorities for the authorization to found another psychoanalytic institute in Los Angeles.

(2) It was agreed that this should be effected in an amicable way.

(3) In order to preserve the continuity of the training of the students and to protect their rights and privileges, it was agreed that until the other institute is recognized by the proper authorities the three withdrawing members officially remain members of the present institute. The sense of this particular agreement was that a separation into two institutes now takes place de facto, if not de jure; and each of the two groups is free to develop its own curriculum and appoint its own lecturers. *NAME:
J. A. BOYD*

(4) Until the other institute will be established, the students now in training will continue to receive endorsement and diplomas from the present Institute. Upon recognition and establishment of the other Institute, any student may choose which Institute he will join.

(5) For the purpose of enabling the dissenting group to have the four training analysts required by the American Psychoanalytic Association for the establishment of new institutes, Dr. Norman Levy was appointed a training analyst, with the understanding that he accept candidates for the new institute only.

(6) Dr. Carel Van der Heide was appointed a training analyst of the present Institute.

- (7) It was agreed that the present Reconstruction Committee continue to meet until all official recognition of the other Institute was given by the American Psychological Association.
- (8) It was agreed that no election should be held and no changes made in the number of and offices held in the present Association until the other Institute will be officially established.
- (9) It was agreed that no election should be held and no changes made in the number of and offices held in the present Association until the other Institute has been officially recognized.
- (10) It was agreed that the other Institute receive 3/7 of the amount of the treasury of the present Institute when the other Institute receives 3/7 of the amount of the treasury of the present Institute.
- (11) It was agreed that the other Institute receive 3/7 of the cost of its annual convention by the American Psychological Association.
- (12) It was agreed to add to the amount the other Institute will receive upon the initiation of the American Psychological Association.
