Dear Kato:

Many thanks for the abstract of your paper as well as for the Holiday Greetings. I hope you will write your paper just as you have outlined it. The only possible duplication will be in Dr. Baum's paper, but it is a minor part of his proposal and he has more than enough as it is. I shall ask him to focus on his major theme which will be the analyst's capacities for empathy and counter-transference at various stages in his development from student taking his first "control" cases to senior on the verge of retirement. He mentioned reactions to major life stresses, but he can certainly eliminate those you will be dealing with.

I have a first draft of a paper from Dr. Tolpin, and she will be dealing with the possibilities for insight and research in connection with being taken by surprise or being puzzled in analytic work. I haven't heard yet from Greenson, and it may be that he will wait to see what everyone else is doing! Very best to you and your husband - I'm not sure if he is called Larry!

Sincerely,

W. Orr
