Los Angeles 4

Dear Mrs. Fenichel:

As I expect that Windholz's are in labor pains by now, may I trouble you for some literary references for a seminary of our Child Guidance Clinic, that I am preparing on 'stealing and lying'?

I would like to present-at least in an abstract, Abraham's brilliant last paper on a high class swindler. I have it only in the original but suspect it might have been published in his selected papers, London, 1927, Hogarth's Press. Do you know by any chance where one could get it?

Has Simmel's paper on the doctor's game ever been translated and where? It is particularly heavily written in a Teutonic philosophical style. If I knew his Los Angeles address, I would ask him direct.

I am fully aware how busy you are and if I would not suspect that you must have a tremendous analytical library around you, I wouldn't have dared to bother you. You might diagnose me like Paula Dehmel's children's book (remember?) as Frage-fritze und die Plappertasche. Long, long ago.....

With best personal regards.

Yours sincerely,
