Dear Dr. Fawcett,

Many thanks for letting me read your interesting paper. I was shocked to find how similar your views are to those of some people who, much later than you, tackled the two mechanisms of identification. I don't find it meagre. All one might say against publishing the paper as it is, concerns the case material. Could you not freshen it up? Or could you add new material? If you did that and went into a description of Lewis's similar views, you would probably find the Quarterly very sympathetic. I think it's a fine piece.

No we are not going to Europe. I am not well and rich enough. The Dalakh is coming fine - but there are beautiful flowers of all kinds around me and I enjoy them very much.

As always joins me in sending you warmest regards.

Yours sincerely
Ernst Kris
